MN DFL Asian Pacific Caucus

“Helping Asian Pacific
Minnesotans to show up, organize and speak up in Minnesota politics”

About the DFL

The Democratic–Farmer–Labor Party today is the Minnesota arm of the national Democratic Party, the oldest political party in the world. Its history is distinctive, however, because it also has its roots in third-party protest movements. The DFL came into being in its modern form when the Minnesota Democratic and Farmer–Labor parties merged in April 1944.

Since then, the MN DFL has worked to defend Civil and Human Rights, keep government accessible, support education, and advocate on behalf of issues that are central to the livelihood of all Minnesotans.

About the Asian Pacific Caucus

The purpose of the Asian Pacific Caucus is to make sure that the Asian Pacific Minnesotans show up, organize and speak up.

Asian Pacific Minnesotans will do that because many in our communities are disfranchised, don't have a rightful place at the table and our voices are not heard.

By organizing and participating, we are assured that the issues that are important to us get a fair hearing. Issues like civil rights, immigration, elimination of discrimination, ethnic appropriate health care and better education of our kids.

Goals of the Asian Pacific Caucus

The DFL Asian Pacific Caucus meets monthly and discussed important topical issues regarding the promotion and advancement of Asians within the DFL.

The Asian Pacific Caucus works to recruit Asians into the political process, provide training for prospective candidates, and dismantle the discriminatory policies in Minnesota.

The Asian Pacific Caucus will screen and consider endorsement of candidates seeking Party office prior to DFL Party endorsement, focusing on cultural diversity and affirmative action at all levels of the DFL.
